Hi Billy,

There's a ticket for this request, to treat for cockroaches and mice in the west wing ground floor room G - 74 . Can you call me tomorrow morning at 7 am. Also they're getting bad smell (dead mice), do you have couple of bad air sponges to place above the ceiling and underneath the desks.

Thank you sir,

Per the inquiry that we received from NBC, here is the story.

A new toilet seat for the Oval Office bathroom, a DVR for the vice president, a large screen TV requested by the first lady and a new chandelier for the president's dining room are among the hundreds of work orders submitted by the White House since January, according to federal records obtained by News4.

White House officials submitted hundreds of requests for repairs, equipment and pest control to building administrators with the U.S. General Services Administration, which helps manage maintenance needs in the West Wing and East Wing of the White House.

The work orders submitted in 2017 are similar in number to those made in 2016 during the final year of the Obama Administration, according to News4's review. But the documents show a quick flurry of requests made shortly after Inauguration Day and indicate some were specifically made by high-ranking officials in the White House. The records also offer a rare glimpse into the granular work required to maintain a major government facility.

The hundreds of work orders reviewed by News4 reveal the wide scope of requests received by the Public Buildings Service, ranging from heating system repairs to furniture moves to pest control. A request to repair a door release button in the White House Situation Room was made soon after a request to install new draperies in the first lady's second-floor East Wing office, which specifically sought an "overall effect of the room being taller."

The General Services Administration's Public Building Service manages building maintenance and repairs for about 9,000 federal government facilities, including at least 31 in the District of Columbia. The portfolio of buildings includes federal courthouses, headquarters for federal agencies and high-profile sections of the White House, including the Oval Office, Brady Press Briefing Room and East Wing.

According to the work orders reviewed by News4, maintenance workers were asked to respond to reports of mice infiltrating the White House Navy mess food service area and the White House Situation room. There were also at least four reported cockroach infestations on the grounds and a complaint of ants in the White House chief of staff's office.
